The Power of Early Intervention: Preventing Abuse Through Early Childhood Supports

Early childhood programs create the conditions where families are supported, children are nurtured, and risk factors are reduced before they escalate into crisis. Join us to take an honest look at how La's early intervention landscape is working, where the gaps remain, and why investing in the earliest years is one of the most effective strategies we have for protecting children and strengthening families. Explore the evidence behind early childhood supports, how these programs intersect with child welfare prevention, and examine the critical role that frontline workers, home visitors, educators, pediatricians, and community partners play in connecting families to services early.
